

We ask that you complete the following pages in order to better help us design the landscape of your dreams. The following pages include elements such as landscape priorities, yard usage and activities, future modifications, evaluation and goals, design styles, plants and material choices and lighting; as well as budgeting and scheduling. All elements listed above provide us with specific data and ranges needed to complete your project with the utmost attention. Below is a list of all phases to our design process:

Site Analysis (Phase One):

This begins with measuring of the site, including the buildings that are involved with the design area. An inventory of existing features such as fencing, hardscaping, trees and shrubs, etc is taken. Site conditions are noted that might affect the design, such as views that need to be blocked, views that need to be accentuated, amount of slope, prevailing winds, sun/shade patterns, undesirable noise, etc. Photos are also taken of the property at this time.

Conceptual Work (Phase Two):

The property is drafted to scale, locating all important pieces of the existing landscape. Utilizing all information gathered from the client and on-site work, a Conceptual Drawing is created that will often contain a variety of options for design of the property or area. Plant selections will be made to represent design solutions, but they will be general in nature. Specific details in reference to hardscaping will be included here. Photos and other media will be brought to help present ideas.

Conceptual Presentation (Phase Three):

This part of the design is very enjoyable, allowing you to see your property and its possibilities in visual form. At this meeting we will solidify the final plan. This concludes the Conceptual Phase of the design. (Note: If there are any changes to the design after this point, these changes will be considered additional design time and will be charged accordingly at the hourly rate).

Final Presentation (Phase Four):

Once all information has been finalized, the final copy of the design is completed, and the Design Packet is presented to you. During the installation process at least one member of our professional staff will be on-site at some point in time during each work day, in order to guarantee that your project is proceeding as planned. If you have any questions or concerns at this time, feel free to contact our office at 856.455.7832
